Research Interests Modern East Asian Political Thought, Imperialism, Social Problems, Question of Fascism, Social Movements in Postwar Japan, Territorialization and Political Subjectification

Affiliation Assistant Professor
Institute of Social Research and Cultural Studies, National Yang Ming Chiao Tung University

Dr. Chan holds a Ph.D. in Advanced Social and International Studies from the Graduate School of Arts and Sciences, University of Tokyo. She was a Postdoctoral Fellow of JSPS affiliated with the Graduate School of Political Science, Waseda University. From 2018 to 2023, her academic work focused on “the political thought of (non)territorialization,” analyzing the transformation of political subjectification of people under ‘the episteme prompted by the interplay of social question and imperial question’ between 1896 and 1924 in Japan and Taiwan.

Dr. Chan’s current works examine the transformation of social question against the backdrop of the Rice Riots of 1918 under the title of “Rice Crisis and the Question of Fascism 1927-1937”. It inquires ‘the episteme prompted by the interplay of rice and fascism’ to explore discourses driven by food crises and the Shōwa agriculture depression in Japan. It analyzes the discourses amongst Japanese Marxists, state socialist and anarchist, emphasizing the dynamics of territorialization and political subjectification.
